

Apostrophes

Apostrophes are a stumbling block for many people. Even in professional signs and ads, apostrophes are frequently misused. There are three correct uses for the apostrophe and a few incorrect ones you must avoid.

Do use an apostrophe to indicate contractions (omitted letters):

we've (for we have) they're (for they are) can't (for cannot) you're (for you are) won't (for will not) it's (for it is)

Don't confuse the contractions they're, you're, and it's with the possessives their, your, and its.

Do use an apostrophe to indicate possessives (ownership):

Singular or plural nouns not ending in -s take an apostrophe and -s.

a child's drawing
the children's books
the women's luncheon

Singular nouns ending in the sounds (s) or (z) or (sh) take an apostrophe and -s.

Alice's restaurant*
Mr. Davis's house*

Marx's writings*
the fish's habitat

However, the following exceptions to the above rule prevent awkward pronunciation:

Jesus's teachings*
Odysseus's wanderings*

Socrates's wisdom*
Moses's laws*

Plural nouns ending in the sounds (s) or (z) take only an apostrophe.

four years' delay
ladies' shoes*
my parents' anniversary

For joint ownership of one item, only the last noun takes the possessive form.

Joe, Tom, and Liz's computer

For multiple separate ownership, each noun takes the possessive form.

the girls' and boys' bathrooms

Do use an apostrophe to make plurals of single letters (to prevent confusion):

Last semester he earned all A's, and she earned C's and D's (not As, Cs, and Ds).
Dot your i's and cross your t's (not is and ts).

Avoid the following common apostrophe errors:

Do not use an apostrophe with possessive personal pronouns ending in –s:

hers	his	ours
theirs	yours	its

Don't confuse the possessives their, your, and its with the contractions they're, you're, and it's.

Do not use an apostrophe with singular nouns that are not possessive and end in the sound (s):

The Bates family lives on Oasis Lane.
The house paint is sold on aisle ten.

Do not use an apostrophe to form plurals:

one shoe, two shoes
one puppy, two puppies
one leaf, two leaves

Do not use an apostrophe in plural numbers and abbreviations:

She was dealt a king, two 8s, and two 3s.
My grandfather was born in the 1800s.
The Nobel laureate held two PhDs.

Once you've learned these simple rules for forming contractions, possessives, and plurals, you'll be able to use apostrophes correctly. Remember that the spell-check feature on your computer will not always catch and correct an apostrophe error, so pay particular attention to them when you're proofreading your papers. Avoid the embarrassment of referring to all the toy's on sale or the dog chased it's ball. Correct apostrophe use will help indicate your excellent command of English writing skills.
